-HENNESSEY'S HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER-

FLYING HAS BEEN A DREAM SINCE SIX

Kaden Hawk, now 20, said it all started when he was 6 years old with a flight to Las Vegas. Kaden said, "I was hooked, I loved the feeling of flight and after that trip that was it, I wanted to fly." It started with video games, then moved to Styrofoam planes, RC helicopters, and drones. Kaden said, "My first helicopter ride at a Dodge dealership in Enid really sealed the need to fly".

Kaden's first venture into remote-controlled aircraft was with a helicopter from the mall, but it lasted only a short time. He soon upgraded to several other RC planes, eventually moving on to drones.

him. At about this same time, the airlines dropped the requirement for a college degree for pilots making the point of entry easier.

Kaden took his first "Discovery Flight" in Kingfisher on July 5, 2021, where you get to fly the plane for the first time. After that flight, he decided to take the next step and get his pilot's license. The 40 mandatory training hours were slow going due to the cost and limited availability of aircraft coupled with inclement weather.

Most of Kaden's flight hours were logged in a Cessna 172 at Wrenn Aviation in Enid. Kaden said, "Taking breaks between lessons was

After graduating from Hennessey High School in 2021, he tried college at NOC with a major in mathematics and physical science but quickly realized that was not the path for

PAVILION WORK BEGINS

Construction on the new John Deutschendorf Memorial Pavilion has officially begun! The pavilion is located one block off Main St., on West 1st street. The first step in the construction process involves removing all of the old foundations and concrete from buildings that were demolished years ago. Bryan Burch, Wastewater Supervisor with the Town of Hennessey, has been hard at work over the past few days, pulling up concrete in preparation for the upcoming dirt work.

Once the groundwork is complete, Lightle Sand & Construction will donate the fill dirt needed to raise and level the structure location. David Fuksa's F5 Construction will then build the pad site in preparation for concrete. The town, along with Lightle's, Fuksa's, and Hennessey Metal Buildings, is generously donating their time to make this project possible.

The John Deutschendorf Memorial Pavilion will be a fitting tribute to the late metal building contractor, from Hennessey. This project is part of the Discover Hennessey Program developed by All About Hennessey.

OMEGA SOFTBALL AT NATIONALS IN BRANSON, MO

Four talented softball players from Hennessey joined forces with players from neighboring towns, including Waukomis, Ringwood, Tonkawa, Blackwell, and Enid, to form a team called Omega. This team competed in the 14u C National Championship Series in Branson, MO, where they faced off against 35 teams from across the country. In the end, Omega emerged as the runner-up, an impressive feat considering the tough competition they faced.

Although Omega's stats on the USA app were not particularly impressive, they proved that heart and determination are far more valuable than numbers. Many opposing coaches considered Omega to be a "dark horse," but the team's unwavering spirit and resilience helped them overcome the odds.

It's worth noting that out of the 35 teams that competed, the final two were both from Oklahoma, and four of the top eight teams were from the state. This is a testament to the talent and dedication of Oklahoma's young athletes.

GAS LEAK EVACUATES BANK

Thursday morning, July 6th at about 9 am all of the employees at the Community State Bank were asked to evacuate the building by Oklahoma Natural Gas. Bank Manager Carl Storm said, "There was a strong smell of gas inside the bank." ONG crews located a leak in the utility easement behind several residents behind the bank and worked to make a repair. The Bank was able to reopen at about 1 pm after being closed for 4 hours.

Flying has been a dream continued hard, I couldn't get the landings down. I came back after about 4 or 5 months with a new flight instructor and landed on the first try perfectly."

The next hurdle was the check ride to get a license. Kaden said, "You have to book in advance. It just kept raining and we had to reschedule 3 times. The test kept getting pushed back and I kept forgetting stuff. I had to learn everything, then wait 3 weeks. Did that 3 times and finally passed the test on May 30, 2023. This was by far the hardest thing I have ever done."

Now that he has his private pilot's license, the next steps include getting his Instrument rating, Commercial, Multi-Engine, and becoming a CFI (Certified Flight Instructor). The final step will be to obtain his "ATP" (Airline Transport license) which requires 1500 hours of flight time. To get these certifications, Kaden has enrolled in the ATP flight school in Oklahoma City where he will spend the next 7 months of college-like training. Kaden said, "They have a great cadet program that pairs you with airlines when you're ready."

The overall goal for Kaden is to fly cargo for FedEx or UPS but would also be interested in passenger airlines as well. Meanwhile, Kaden is working for Chris Pribil's farming operation this summer with hopes to be flying commercially by the age of 25.

Hennessey's Ranch Room: Been Here, Been That

By Sara Jane Richter

If anything has survived 130 years, it obviously has a rich history. The two-story Ranch Room at 110 North Main Street indeed possesses a rich history. The repository of that history is one fellow—Scotty Hajek, Hennessey's unofficial town historian. If it happened or lived in Hennessey, Hajek knows all about it.

The Ranch Room is unassuming-looking on the outside, but the interior of the long, narrow building tucked between the space that used to house the Ortman Theater and is Terry's Pump and Supply oozes with mementos of its past—movie posters and lobby cards, yellowed newspaper clippings and dented metal signs, Hennessey High School memorabilia and the painting of the Pat Hennessey Massacre, letters and canceled checks, record albums and faded photographs. With 130 years under its belt, lots of memories should decorate the interior.

Hajek currently owns the Ranch Room and serves as the fount of information about this Hennessey icon. He held court behind the cattle brand-encrusted bar while I sat on the other side, pen in one hand and a beer in the other. He commenced talking and offered detailed information about the building since its initial construction.

Built in June 1893, the building pre-dates the 1893 Cherokee Strip Run and certainly pre-dates statehood, so it's seen everything that the community and the State of Oklahoma has done since. Fred Fromholz had the vision to build the building which served initially as the Clipper Drug Emporium. It shared the name of "Clipper" as the town newspaper was headquartered in a building across the street and was owned by the same person, a Mr. Campbell.

Two years later, William Parks purchased the building and moved the drug store portion south of where Annie's Flowers is today. After the drug store left, Mrs. C.H. Kemper established a millinery shop (a ladies' hat store) there. Her husband, C.H. Kemper, became Hennessey's first mayor. Their son, Charles, was born—probably in the millinery store that doubled as their home too—in 1900 and became a rather well-known Hollywood character actor in the 1930's and 1940's until his death in 1948.

Not long after, City Drug Store moved in to share the space with the hat store. E.P. Clark set up a short order café on the second floor. In addition to the café, Clark rented rooms—about 20—to long-term or short-term guests. In the back of the second floor, Dr. Champion had his professional office and saw many patients.

Notoriety moved in too at the turn of the century, for a painter named David George rented a room in the upstairs hotel. He eventually moved to Enid and committed suicide in a rented room above what is now Garfield Furniture Store. On George's deathbed in 1903, Dr. Champion heard the man confess that he was actually John Wilkes Booth, President Abraham Lincoln's assassin in 1865. The veracity of this story has never been proven absolutely, but the tale has garnered a following of many folks who believe that indeed Booth lived as George for many decades.

In 1903, Frank Ratliff put a grocery store in the front of the building and a cigar factory in the back of the building. Ratliff's cigar advertising bragged that all of his cigar rollers had "clean hands." Ratliff was taken with the newfangled horseless carriage and purchased the first automobile in Hennessey. He liked the vehicle so much that he established the Hennessey Motor Company and gave up on the grocery and cigar businesses.

In the end of the first decade of the 20th century, the Ranch Room became Hennessey's first theater, the Novelty Theater, which featured silent movies; however, it closed by 1910. After the theater's closure, another grocery store occupied the space, first owned by J.E. Gilbert and then by the Fry Brothers. The brothers sold the enterprise to E.C. Moore in 1921, but he soon sold out to Noble Young who ran a mercantile store from 1921 until 1935.

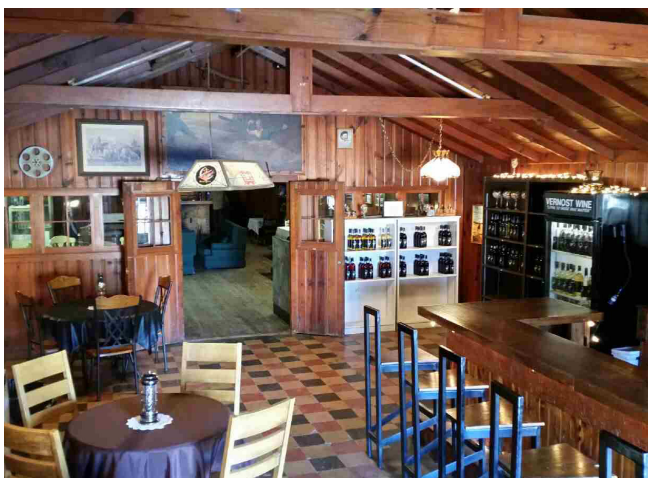

An early oil supply company operated by the Knox Oil Company had the store from 1935 until 1945 when the space became an automobile parts store. During this decade, P.C. Clark had a real estate company on the second floor. Dr. Woolwine, a dentist, shared some of the upstairs space with Clark.

The Ortman, Hutoka and Garwood, purchased the building in 1945; they owned the theater directly to the south. Mrs. Ortman wanted to remodel the building to resemble saloons seen in popular Old West movies of the day. She dubbed the space The Ranch Room. Therefore, she had wood paneling installed over the interior walls. Mrs. Ortman herself burned the brands in the front of the bar. The Ortman's son attended college in California, so the whole family moved to the West Coast, but returned once Gaylord had graduated.

During the family's absence, Ranch Room Drug Store occupied the space; it was owned by Cecil and Kathryn Enix; Kathryn happened to be Mrs. Ortman's sister. (Mrs. Enix's piano on which she taught many Hennessey young people to play stands on the south side of the Ranch Room today.) The drug store sported a soda fountain and a dance floor until it became another oil field supply store in 1960. Four years later, Jean Walter, who with her husband Art operated the Hennessey Clipper newspaper, purchased the building and opened the Tot Shop, a children's clothing store. Beginning in 1982, Penny Turner ran the Tot Shop. The second-floor hotel/rooming house closed in the early 1970's. The last resident to vacate the premises was Helen Vculek who worked at 4-T's Grocery for many years.

By 2008, the clothing store had closed, and the future looked bleak for the Ranch Room. An auction was held to dispose of the furnishings and the building. Scott Hajek purchased the building at that time. He opened the Ranch Room as a teen recreation center until 2014 when Wes and Meagan Hardin moved in to build their winery business—Vernost Wine. ("Vernost" translates to "trust" in Czech.)

The Ranch Room remains a vibrant part of Hennessey with its wine bar which doubles as a venue for weddings, reunions, dances, community or family events, or live music on weekends. After 130 years, the Ranch Room stands as a testament to the history of a community even before the community existed. It has worn many hats, served many purposes, housed many ventures, and seen many people open that front door. In a dark, old-fashioned building, the history of Hennessey is kept alive by the local historian who cared enough about his community and this building to learn about it, who memorized the stories, and who shares his knowledge with those willing to sit and listen, reflect and revel in the history of a small town in central Oklahoma. The Ranch Room really is the heart of Hennessey, and thankfully, Scotty won't let us forget that.

MAIN ST POWER OUTAGE

Last Thursday, July 6th at about 8:30 am the west side of Main St lost power knocking out ser-vice to all the businesses between 2nd Street and Hwy 51. All of the restaurants in that area had to close and wait out the repairs. OG&E arrived at 10:30 am and restored power shortly after. No reason was given for the power failure. The Hennessey Police directed traffic at Main and Oklahoma until the Street Department arrived with a 4-way stop sign.
