PAVILION PHASE ONE COMPLETE

by Jack Quirk

What started several years ago as a dream has now become a reality in Downtown Hennessey. Phase One of the "John Deutschendorf Memorial Pavilion" is now complete. This would not be possible without the local Hennessey businesses that stepped up and donated their services, products, and time.

Many years ago the town acquired the old Lee Lumber property on W 1st Street. Shortly after there were ideas of making it a park or building a community building. In the meantime, Richard Simunek purchased the adjoining land to the south and wanted to donate it to the town. Many years passed and nothing happened, Simunek proposed building a community building and donating the land he owned to the town but it never got off the ground.

About two years ago the Hennessey Board of Trustees approved a plan from All About Hennessey to create the "Discover Hennessey" program that would oversee improvement projects and promote Hennessey.

This week the long-awaited pavilion phase one is now complete. Jack Quirk, with All About Hennessey, said, "This was possible with a great deal of help and donations from our community. There is no way a project this big could become a reality with just town funding."

Groundbreaking occurred on August, 31st 2023 as F5 Construction owned by David and Katrina Fuksa donated their services to prepare the site for the fill dirt to elevate the site. 800 cubic yards of fill dirt was donated by Lightle Sand & Construction and was delivered by Dollar Trucking. David Fuksa said, "We need this much fill to make this sight-drain property."

Daniel Construction of Hennessey installed the large concrete piers 8 feet deep to support the structure. When the building parts arrived they were sent to Thurmond Gas Measurement Co. where they generously donated the black paint and labor to paint the structure before erecting it.

This week the Hennessey Metal Building Systems crew assembled the frame and installed the roof completing phase one of the project at no cost to the Town. For this, the new pavilion will be called "John Deutschendorf Memorial Pavilion" in remembrance of the founder of Hennessey Metal Building Systems.

Quirk said, "To date, over $100,000 in services have been donated by F5 Construction, Lightle Sand & Construction, Dollar Trucking, Daniel Construction, Hennessey Metal Buildings, and Richard Simunek." It is important to note that this is a multi-phase project that will continue as more companies and individuals step forward to help with the cost of completing it.

The pavilion as it stands is 100 X 50 and has a dirt floor. Phase Two is to raise funds to build a 100 X 100 concrete floor. Phase Three will be to add 25 feet to the north and south sides of the building making it a full 100 X 100 structure.

Additional phases will include funding to enclose the structure, add restrooms and a kitchen, and heat and A/C.

Quirk said, "We have established a donors fund for anyone that would like contribute to completing this new community asset for our citizens to enjoy for years to come."

If you have the means and would like to help complete this project, please contact Jack Quirk at Jack@KJFilmWorks.com. We are very fortunate to have such a high quality of local contractors who are willing to come forward and support our community.

Multi-Faceted Man: Robert Bryan, Artist

By Sara Jane Richter

Even as a child, Robert Bryan realized that he possessed artistic talent. His teachers curried his creativity by encouraging him to draw and paint. Growing up in Okeene, Robert and his family moved to Hennessey in between Robert's junior and senior year, and he graduated from Hennessey High School in 1974.

Art might make a good career, but Robert's life got busy as all of our lives do. He matured, graduated from Oklahoma State University, married his lovely wife Brenda in 1983, had two daughters named Lindsey and Jennifer, and entered the world of insurance with a Farm Bureau office in Hennessey. Art and his interest in the field fell by the wayside. He indicated that he just didn't have the time or the patience for his art any longer.

One of Robert Bryan's wonderful works of art

In his forties, he wanted a hobby that would relax him and allow him a creative outlet. Therefore, he thought that he'd tap into his long-dormant art talent and decided that a paintbrush would feel good in his hand once again.

He returned to college to earn a teaching certification in art and taught art at Emerson Middle School in Enid for a few years. After retiring from the public school classroom and while working for Metals USA in Enid, Art tapped him on the shoulder again. He determined that he should paint for himself and learn about the field to improve his skills, so he enrolled in a painting class offered for adults at Hobby Lobby in Enid. Here, he learned all about acrylics, and his natural knack for drawing and painting came back to him. That paintbrush felt better and better. He enrolled in other classes, too, like figure drawing and oil painting. He likes using oils best as he soon learned that using oils allows him to easily cover his mistakes on a canvas.

Now that maturity had increased his available time and patience, Bryan realized that he needed time and self-motivation to engage in a painting project and to complete that project. His favorite subjects include cowboy life and cowboys, horses, cattle, deer, elk, buffalo, and dogs, such as retrievers and pointers. He prefers not to include people in his works, but if he does populate his canvases with folks, they are not the major focus of the image. He loves painting Mother Nature's handiwork.

On a personal level, Robert loves the outdoors and hunting. In the summer of 2005, Dr. John O. Smith commissioned him to paint a mural on the north outside wall of his optometrist office south of Hennessey. The subject was Dr. Smith, his daughter, and his bird dogs on a quail hunting excursion. This mural commands the attention of drivers heading south on Highway 81 or traveling on the east-west Conoco Road. He's never attempted a piece that large since. Even though he's been approached to do other murals, he doesn't relish climbing on ladders or clinging to scaffolding nowadays.

Bryan now paints for himself and for others, too. He enjoys working on commissioned artwork as he wishes to please the person who has requested a particular subject and to be honest, he likes the money that a well-done commissioned project will bring. He has found that the art that he produces to please himself perhaps is not what the general public likes: the irony of the art business. Of course, he appreciates those who commission his pieces, as he shines best when he has a specific art target in mind.

Mr. Bryan is a perfectly happy painting to please patrons, family, friends, and himself. He learns something with each piece that he produces and is proud that his paintings excite others about the fine arts. Artists like Robert interpret the world for others to see and appreciate. Pablo Picasso once said, "The meaning of life is to find your gift. The purpose of life is to give it away." That is what artists like Robert do; they give of themselves so that others may be inspired to examine more closely the world around them and to celebrate the excitement, color, movement, and glory of life.

PIONEER GIVES THE SCOOP AT ANNUAL MEETING

by Amy Smith

On Tuesday, May 7th, Pioneer Telephone Coop held its 71st annual meeting at the Kingfisher County Fairgrounds. The event began with breakfast burritos, donuts, and hot coffee, followed by several rounds of bingo. Pioneer employees ensured that their guests were well taken care of by providing unlimited coffee refills and new bingo cards. District Trustees accompanied the Pioneer executive team, including Brenda Walta, Kim Grellner, Blake Callaham, and Mike Baustert. The team spoke about Pioneer's achievements, overall financial health, the advancements made with fiber optics, as well as an exciting new launch regarding Wi-Fi that will be revealed later this month. Stay tuned! Unfortunately, no voting was able to take place as the quorum was not quite met. Pioneer was happy to give back to their customers by giving away over $4,500 in door prizes. Due to the amount of rain from last night's storms, vehicles were unable to park in the grass area. Therefore, Superintendent Mr. Glover with Kingfisher Public Schools graciously allowed the use of their charter bus to shuttle attendees from the First Baptist Church parking lot to the County Fairgrounds.
