LOW RIDING, HOPPING, AND LOTS OF CHROME

The first annual Hennessey Hood & Hydraulics Show bounced into town Saturday, September 13th, literally, and turned the event into a rolling car carnival.

A total of 52 cars and 9 hoppers rumbled into the show just north of 4Ts Market on Mitchell Rd. from Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, and Texas, each shinier and more tricked out than the last. Promoters Harold Shaw and Ashley Zielny pulled together a show like Hennessey has never seen, with rides ranging from a classic 1938 Chevrolet to lowriders so detailed they looked like rolling works of art.

But the real jaw-dropper? The hopper competition. Picture cars flinging themselves skyward like caffeinated kangaroos while officials stood by with what might be the world's biggest ruler, measuring each bounce to crown a champion. The higher the hop, the louder the crowd—and the more people wondered how those suspensions survived.

Several hundred spectators packed the area, grazing through food trucks and shopping vendors, and grooving to the DJ's playlist. It was part car show, part block party, and part physics experiment, proving once again that in Hennessey, even cars know how to dance.

THIS SATURDAY IS THE BIG DAY!

15TH ANNUAL HENNESSEY UNITED TOWN-WIDE GARAGE SALE - SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20TH

Mark your calendars, grab your walking shoes, and bring plenty of small bills, because the biggest bargain hunt of the year is here! Hundreds of treasure-seekers will descend on Hennessey, hunting everything from gently used sofas to that random box of VHS tapes you swore someone would want again someday.

Something New!

This year, the Hennessey Mercantile is introducing a Main Street Market along W. Oklahoma Street. It's perfect for folks who live out of town but still want to join the fun. Oklahoma Street west of Main street will be closed to traffic and open for vendors, basically, one giant yard sale block party. To snag a spot, call Stacy Cline at 405-853-5454.

Get Ready!

It's time to purge those closets, garages, and that mysterious "junk drawer" that could fund a vacation if you priced it right. Don't forget your signs - big, bold, and with arrows! (Nothing says "follow me to the deals" like a neon poster board pointing the way to your driveway.)

Get on the Map!

Want bargain hunters to find you without GPS drama? For just $5, you can get your sale listed on the official town map. Write your name and address on an envelope, tuck in your five bucks, and drop it off at the All About Hennessey office, 300 S. Main. There's even a handy mailbox out front-no excuses! All Money goes directly to Hennessey United. Deadline to be on the map is: Thursday, September 18th at NOON. Maps will be available online at allabouthennessey.com Thursday evening. On Friday, you can pick up a map at any of Hennessey's local convenience stores, the Hennessey Mercantile, and Town Hall before noon. On Saturday, maps will be available at all convenience stores and the Mercantile.

SKIN DEEP BEAUTY

An esthetician is a licensed skin care specialist who provides treatments designed to improve the health and appearance of the skin, including facials, peels, and hair removal. I had to start this story with the definition of "esthetician" because, truth be told, I still can't pronounce the word correctly! And before you jump to conclusions when you see the pictures in this story, let me clarify: no, I'm not turning into a mummy. I have far more exciting plans for my Halloween costume this year, so you'll have to stay tuned for that adventure.

Transitions by Bonnie Flesher

Now, back to the woman of the hour: Savanah Holmes Johnston. Savanah grew up in a bustling household as one of four children, the daughter of Michelle Buck and Clay Holmes. After graduating from Kingfisher High School in 2008, she married Wesley Johnston, who works for the Kingfisher County Sheriff's Department. Together, they're raising four wonderful children: Raegan (16), Mausen (15), Easton (11), and Aiden (9).

Savanah's career path didn't start in skincare. She first attended school to become a dental assistant and spent some time working in the dental field. In 2016, she decided to take a leap of faith and follow her true passion of owning her own boutique. While balancing work, family life, and the demands of school, she graduated in 2018 as a licensed esthetician.

During our conversation, Savanah shared that her own journey hasn't always been easy because she has battled self-esteem issues. That experience fuels her passion for helping others feel good about themselves. Yes, you'll leave her boutique with soft, glowing skin, but her bigger mission is to help clients leave with a renewed sense of confidence and self-worth.

And let me tell you, as someone who loves to talk, it's a rare thing for me to be speechless. But the moment I lie down on Savanah's facial bed and she works her magic, I go completely quiet. So quiet, in fact, that she has to ask if I'm okay!

Savanah's services aren't just for women either. Men can enjoy facials, body waxing, and high-quality skincare products as well. Her boutique, The Skin and Beauty Boutique at 124 North Main Street, Kingfisher has been a labor of love and a work in progress that keeps evolving as Savanah builds her vision of helping people feel beautiful inside and out.

RACHEL BUFORD BLACK EARNS NEXTGEN UNDER 30 RECOGNITION

The NextGen Under 30 Leadership and Award Recognition Program, founded in 2011, has celebrated thousands of talented young Oklahomans who are shaping the future of our state. This year, Rachel Buford Black, a 2012 graduate of Hennessey High School, was named to the 2025 NextGen Under 30 list in the Healthcare category.

Rachel's academic journey reflects her drive to serve others. She earned her Bachelor of Science in Human Development and Family Science from Oklahoma State University in 2016, her Master of Public Health (MPH) in 2017, and her Doctor of Health Administration (DHA) from OSU Health Sciences Center in 2024. Today, Rachel serves as Senior Manager of Value-Based Contracting Solutions for CVS/Aetna, where she works with doctors and hospitals to design programs that improve care while keeping costs affordable. She describes her work as bridging professional healthcare with the values she learned growing up in rural Oklahoma: hard work, resilience, and a commitment to caring for the community.

Her selection to the NextGen Under 30 list highlights her unique dedication to rural health, particularly in addressing Invisible Health Neglect in Rural Women. Rachel has combined corporate healthcare expertise with grassroots advocacy, creating a platform to raise awareness and bring better resources to small towns. Her storytelling project, Farm Girl Walks, combines her rural upbringing with conversations about health and mental wellness, reminding others that rural voices matter in shaping the future of healthcare.

Looking ahead, Rachel hopes to continue working at the intersection of healthcare and rural life, ensuring that communities like the one that raised her have the resources and support they deserve. And one day, when the time is right, she may even step into public service by running for House District 59.

Rachel says this honor is not hers alone: "I'm deeply grateful for the mentors who believed in me, my family who have always been my foundation, and the community that shaped me. Growing up here taught me the value of hard work, resilience, and looking out for one another, and I carry those lessons with me every day. This recognition is just as much theirs as it is mine." Congratulations, Rachel, on this well-deserved honor.

KINGFISHER COUNTY RETIRED EDUCATORS ASSOCIATION

Hennessey native Ramon Renteria-Lara spoke at the September KCREA meeting on Sept. 3, 2025, at the Kingfisher Memorial Library. Renteria-Lara, Director of Sponsorship and Sales at the Oklahoma Department of Tourism, was recently named to the list Top 40 Hispanic Leaders in Oklahoma.

He reported that Oklahoma tourism is booming, with TravelOK.com receiving 6–8 million hits annually, fueled by the upcoming 100th anniversary of Route 66 in 2026. Visitors are especially drawn to murals, oversized landmarks, and towns along the route. Locally, the large metal cowboy hat north of Hennessey will soon be painted with the town's name, which Renteria-Lara predicted will become a popular photo spot. He also promoted Oklahoma's 38 state parks and urged attendees to request a Route 66 passport online.

Following his talk, KCREA

President Deborah Maehs opened the meeting. Secretary Kathy Kadavy read and approved the minutes, and Treasurer Dana Golbek reported a balance of $774.80. Membership Chair LaRita Sipe announced 21 paid memberships after mailing 67 letters to county retirees. Scholarship Chair Cathy Howard noted that scholarships were awarded to Ashley Winans and Grace Ann Sinclair. Publicity Chair Maehs said the group's Facebook page will become public this fall. Cards and Memorials Chair Jeanne Kadavy shared updates on member outreach and condolences for the family of former superintendent C. Jack Harrel of Stillwater.

Discussion included plans for National Education Week in November, with a suggestion to revive the nickname "The Rockers." The next meeting will be Nov. 5, 2025, featuring Sen. Darcy Jech and Rep. Mike Dobrinski.

BIDDING BEYOND BORDERS

Chris Cameron of Lippard Real Estate & Auction has built his career on helping families, businesses, and landowners navigate one of the fastest-changing industries in Oklahoma: the auction world.

Cameron's path wasn't a straight one. He first worked in the insurance field but always carried an early fascination with auctions. As a kid, he often tagged along with his father to local sales, drawn to the rapid-fire chant and the excitement of the bidding floor. That interest never faded. With encouragement from mentor Troy Lippard, Cameron made the leap, graduating from the Missouri Auction School and earning his real estate license at the same time.

Over the past decade, he's witnessed and embraced a dramatic transformation in the business. Auctions that once meant setting up tents, lining out tables, and waiting on the weather now reach far wider audiences through online platforms. "We used to hope for a few hundred people at a live sale," Cameron said. "Now, we can have thousands watching and bidding from across the country." The COVID-19 pandemic only accelerated that change, making online auctions a staple rather than a supplement.

But Cameron is quick to correct one of the biggest misconceptions: that auctions are only for distressed properties or "fire sales." In reality, competitive bidding often pushes values above traditional listing prices. "Auctions create energy and urgency," he explained. "That's good for sellers—and it gives buyers a clear shot at fair market value." His advice to newcomers? Watch a few sales before jumping in, so the rhythm and pace feel familiar.

Cameron credits Lippard's team in Enid for the company's strong reputation across Oklahoma. Their adaptability, teamwork, and commitment to customer service, he said, are what keep the business thriving in a world where auctions now run year-round and rarely slow down. Recently, the All About Network did a podcast with Chris. To view the entire podcast, visit allabouthennessey.com
