TOWN HIRES ATTORNEY TO OPPOSE PROPOSED WASTE DUMP

The Town of Hennessey has hired attorney Michael S. Booze to represent the town in its objection to state permit applications for a proposed waste management facility near town. Trustees approved the hire unanimously in a 5-0 vote.

Town Administrator Tiffany Rowen said the contract includes a $2,000 retainer, with Booze's time billed at $350 per hour.

Before the vote, Trustee Harold Shaw asked Booze whether the farmers involved should have separate legal representation or if one attorney could represent everyone. Booze said he is comfortable representing both the town and local landowners as a group and noted he has additional resources through offices in Oklahoma City and Kingfisher. He also said he could bring in additional legal help if needed.

An executive session was later held to discuss confidential legal matters related to the state application. Both Booze and Town Attorney Jared Harrison were present. The mayor said no votes or actions were taken during the closed session.

SR. CITIZEN PROGRAM UPDATES FOCUS ON STABILITY, SAFETY, AND FUTURE IMPROVEMENTS

The Hennessey Senior Citizen Center board met last week to review the town's meal program, focusing on staffing, facilities, and finances. Board members agreed to prioritize program continuity and practical upgrades that best serve local residents.

The board reaffirmed that the center's mission is to provide meals and social connection, not to operate for profit. Currently, meal delivery serves five to six meals per day within city limits. Volunteers are available should the program expand to a second delivery route in the future.

Several kitchen updates are planned following guidance from the health department. A dedicated handwashing sink will be installed, and a malfunctioning dish sanitizer will be removed. It will be replaced with a three-compartment sink system using lower-cost supplies. Additional improvements include replacing wooden surfaces with stainless steel prep tables and planning for a new commercial-grade refrigerator. continued on page 2

AXE & HONOR

By AAN Amy Townsend

When the world slowed to a standstill in 2020, Justin Steckman was searching for something that gave his days purpose when so much felt paused. Woodworking stepped in first, long evenings in the shop, shaping oversized live-edge tables from raw slabs, letting the process steady his mind and restore his spirit. Around that same time, he also answered the call to serve as a firefighter, spending his life next to people he trusts with his safety, heartbeat, and situations most hope to never see.

While building tables, Justin realized something that didn't sit right. He was paying premium prices for massive wood slabs, while tree companies were hauling beautiful, towering trunks to the dump, chipping them, burning them, or grinding them into debris piles. Wood with decades of life, gone in a moment of smoke. Instead of seeing fallen trees as the end of the line, Justin began seeing them as the start of one, imagining the possibility of giving them a second chapter.

Piece by piece and plan by plan, Axe & Honor Tree Co. came to life, named from two worlds that shaped him, the axe symbolizing fire and forestry alike, and honor standing strong as a nod to military service, country, duty, and legacy. With research, heart, and support from his wife, the vision launched, giving trees a renewed story beyond being discarded.

Axe & Honor now serves Hennessey and communities across Oklahoma with tree removal, trimming, stump grinding, forestry mulching, land clearing, brush hogging, dirt work, and even driveway or parking lot debris clearing during snow or ice events. Each job begins with equipment checks and safety walks, followed by flexible planning, because no two trees or jobs are ever the same. In storm or emergency situations, past customers are prioritized first, because loyalty isn't just appreciated; they return it.

But what truly makes Axe & Honor stand apart isn't just the work, it's the transformation. They can remove a tree, mill it on-site, and turn it into something meaningful again. A trunk that once shaded a home could now be the table around which the family gathers. Potential doesn't burn here, it's rebuilt.

Free estimates, advice gladly shared, hands always busy, heart always invested, and roots always in service, Axe & Honor Tree Co. proves the best stories aren't just about taking something down, but about building something back up, stronger than before.

Senior Citizen's Center continued...

The organization will also update its $1-per-year lease with the City of Hennessey to clearly define responsibilities for utilities and building fixtures. Internet service is expected to be added, allowing for computer and printer upgrades.

Financially, the program remains stable but tight. Fundraising assistance is planned for Jan. 17, when the Masons will host a family game night to support needed equipment.

Additional plans include a membership drive, décor updates, and continued community involvement as the program looks ahead to 2025.

BEST IN YEARS: HENNESSEY CHRISTMAS CELEBRATION DRAWS BIG CROWD, BIGGER SMILES

If you missed Hennessey's Christmas festivities on Thursday, December 11, you truly missed one for the books. By nearly every measure, this year's celebration was among the biggest and brightest the town has seen in years, with packed sidewalks, busy storefronts, and a parade lineup that proved even road graders can steal the show when they're wrapped in Christmas lights.

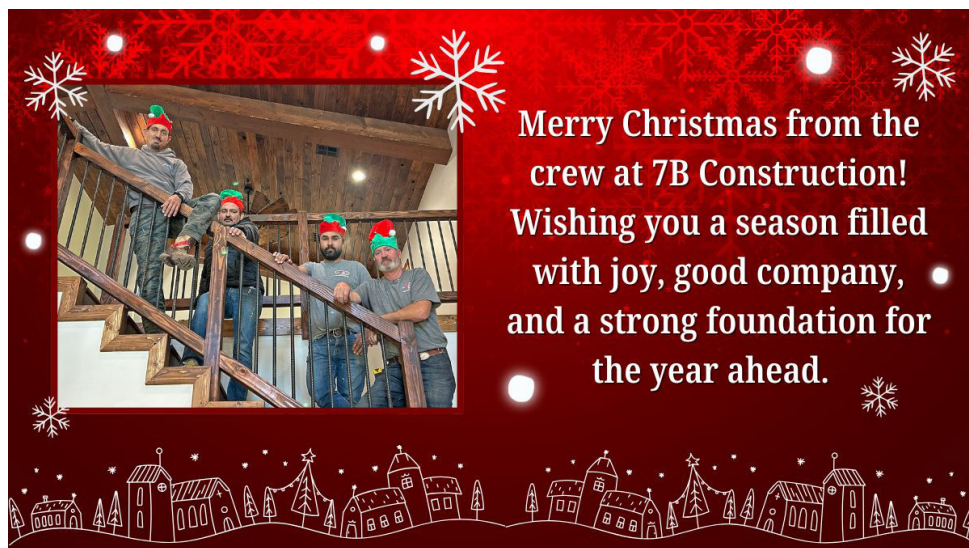

The night kicked off with the All About Hennessey Really Bright Christmas Parade, led by The Pride of Hennessey band and joined by members of the Kingfisher band as they marched down Main Street. Participation was noticeably up, with more decorated trucks and floats than in recent years. Kingfisher County District 2 drew plenty of attention by rolling out two massive, light-covered road graders and bringing the entire county crew along on a trailer, earning cheers and plenty of laughs from the crowd. A new highlight this year was the first annual Lawn Mower Decorating Contest, sponsored by M&D Enterprises, which quickly became a crowd favorite during the parade. First place went to the Hennessey Police Department for a creative and unexpected display featuring a boat, earning a $75 prize. Second place was awarded to Justin Waldrop, whose Grinch-themed mower, complete with detailed sled, costumes, and a scene-stealing Max, earned $25. Organizers also thanked everyone who participated in the 4T's Family Market Shopping Cart Decorating Contest, with RedLeve taking home the top spot.

Following the parade, the Hennessey Lions Club kept the festivities going downtown. Santa Claus visited with an estimated 100 children inside the Mercantile, posing for photos and listening patiently to carefully prepared wish lists. Outside, children lined up for their turn at three oversized piñatas while families visited and warmed up between stops.

The evening wrapped up with Mistletoe Magic, where $5,000 in shopping certificates were awarded, giving winners a timely boost for last-minute Christmas purchases. Restaurants stayed busy, Main Street shops remained open late, and steady foot traffic kept downtown buzzing well into the evening. Adding to the festive atmosphere, the 122 Center on Main Street hosted the Christmas Crafts & Sweets Market, coordinated by Audey Sanders, offering handmade items and sweet treats that encouraged shoppers to linger.

All in all, the night served as a reminder of why small-town Christmas traditions still matter. In Hennessey, they don't just feel festive, they feel like home.

CLO DENIES PROPERTY SALE IN KINGFISHER COUNTY

The Oklahoma Commissioners of the Land Office voted this week to deny the sale of approximately 625 acres of state-owned land north of Okarche, ending months of concern among Kingfisher County residents about the property's future. The land had drawn attention amid speculation it could be sold to a private entity and potentially used for hazardous waste disposal, prompting local landowners and residents to contact state leaders and voice opposition. State Representative Mike Dobrinski shared that the Commissioners ultimately chose not to move forward with the sale, keeping the acreage under CLO management. While no formal proposal for a hazardous waste site was ever submitted, the decision was widely viewed as a win for community involvement and transparency, reinforcing the role local voices can play in land-use decisions across rural Oklahoma.

From our family to yours, we're sending a whole lot of holiday heart your way,
Love, Jackson's of Kingfisher

Testing, Testing, One, Two, Three... Hennessey Tries Out New Street-Sweeping Options

At last month's Hennessey Town Trustees meeting, board members faced a dusty dilemma, what to do with the town's out-of-commission street sweeper. The old machine has officially swept its last street and would cost more to fix than it is worth. Ideas floated from buying a brand-new sweeper, with a price tag of about $150,000, to exploring a more budget-friendly pull-behind model for a tractor.

Over the past month Hennessey Public Works Director Alyssa Kubat has been researching alternatives that would get the streets clean without cleaning out the town's wallet. This week she rolled out a hands-on test, a street-sweeping attachment that hooks onto the town's skid steer. The unit sweeps debris into an attached bin, which can then be dumped into a truck and hauled away.

Kubat said, "We rented this one for a week to try it out and so far it is working great. We are also going to try one from John Deere that has a little different setup and see if it works better." The price tag for an attachment like this runs around $10,000, a far cry from the six-figure cost of a dedicated street sweeper. Kubat will present her findings and recommendations to the Town Board next month. Photos by AAH Jack Quirk
