Todd Cameron's Next Job, Officially Unofficial

After 32 years of teaching, coaching, driving buses, running concessions, fixing problems nobody else knew existed, and quietly knowing where everything is and why, Todd Cameron, Director of IT, has officially submitted his letter of resignation from Hennessey Public Schools not retirement.

And that distinction matters. Because while Todd may be retiring from the classroom, nobody really believes he's leaving the building, at least not completely.

During a recent board discussion, it became clear that replacing Todd won't be a one-person job. It may take several people, a detailed map, and at least one phone call that starts with, "Hey Todd, do you remember where that thing is?"

Todd started his career coaching football, spent time as head basketball and volleyball coach, and has coached just about everything else except track, drove a bus for 25 years, and somehow still found time to teach and mentor generations of students. When asked what he'll miss most, the answer came quickly, the kids.

BIG HAT GETS A PAINT JOB

The world's largest cowboy hat is finally getting a makeover.

Installed on the north end of Hennessey in February 2023, the 24-ft. x 32-ft., all-steel hat weighs in at 12,650 pounds. The Big Hat has been patiently waiting, standing tall but a little weather-worn, for a fresh coat of paint, and its day has finally arrived.

The Hennessey United Board has officially adopted the hat and is footing the bill to give it the finishing touch it deserves. Ron and Ronnie Arter of Eagle Services have taken on the task, which includes sandblasting, priming, and painting this oversized piece of western wear.

The color scheme includes "Bronze" for the hat itself, a rich light tan, paired with "Umbra," a light brown for the hat band. The new look should have the Big Hat ready for plenty of selfies.

Work has already begun, starting with sandblasting, with paint to follow, weather permitting. So if you see the Big Hat looking a little dusty, don't worry, it's just getting ready for its big debut.

Scott Hajek joked, "Now we just need to find a big feather for the hat band!"

The full story of how the hat got to this point will follow in an upcoming edition of the Hennessey Post. Photo by AAN Jack Quirk

So what's next?

UNOFFICIALLY, Todd's new role appears to be District Historian, Emergency Consultant, and Keeper of Institutional Memory, available by phone, text, or a casual "Hey Todd" in the hallway. He plans to help train his replacement and make sure everything is left in good hands.

OFFICIALLY, Todd is heading to Main Street to join his wife, Sheila, at the Hennessey Tag Agency. The family-owned business began when Todd's dad, Dale, took it over in 2002, and Todd's wife, Sheila has been running it ever since, often without a day off. Todd said the office recently hired Jara Simunek following the retirement of longtime employee Billye Baker.

IT'S ASSESSMENT TIME IN KINGFISHER COUNTY

It's assessment time in Kingfisher County. Kingfisher County Assessor Carrie Turner is reminding residents that January 1 through March 15 is the annual assessment period.

Assessment forms have been mailed and may include personal property, business property, manufactured homes, and petroleum listings. Be sure to review your form, verify the information is correct, sign it, and return it before March 15 to avoid penalties.

A few important reminders: Homestead Exemption provides a $1,000 reduction in assessed value. You must own and live in the home as of January 1. Late applications won't be considered until next year.

Senior Freeze is available for homeowners 65 or older with a combined household income under $85,000. This locks in property valuation (not all taxes). Bring your most recent federal tax return and proof of income to apply before March 15.

The Assessor's Office serves as the link between taxpayers and the Oklahoma Tax Commission and is available to help answer questions and assist with filings.

Questions? The Assessor's Office encourages residents to reach out. They're there to help.

Police, School Review Rumors, and Confirm No School Threat

The Hennessey Police Department and Hennessey Public Schools have completed a joint review after rumors circulated about a possible school threat following Christmas break.

According to Hennessey Police reports, on December 31, police were alerted to a rumor that a student may have talked about bringing a firearm to school. The information was shared with school administrators right away, and both the school and police began looking into the situation.

The report stated that Officers spoke with parents and students connected to the reports. One parent said they were not aware of any such statements and confirmed their child did not have access to firearms. Police also spoke directly with the student involved, who denied making any threats and was reminded how serious comments or jokes like that can be.

As the review continued, police and school officials followed up on several reports from students who said they had heard comments or messages about a possible threat. Some of the information was based on rumors passed between students or messages shared during the break. Police checked on each report to determine whether there was any real danger.

During this time, police made sure the student at the center of the rumors was accounted for and not at school. As an added precaution, officers increased patrols on and around campus to help reassure students, staff, and families.

After reviewing all available information, both the police department and school officials determined there was no legitimate threat to the school.

Police emphasized that any report involving school safety is taken seriously and carefully reviewed. They also noted that schools are responsible for notifying parents when concerns arise, with law enforcement providing support and assistance as needed.

Officials thank families and students for speaking up and cooperating, and they encourage the community to continue reporting concerns so they can be addressed quickly and responsibly.

Technology's "Cutting" Edge

By Sara Jane Richter

Mary Voskuhl sitting with her answering service telephone console.

Time passes. Inventors develop. Businesses flourish and fade. Over the last 50 years especially, technology has steadily edged its way into our lives, from cell phones and smart watches to tablets, self-driving vehicles, and even smart glasses. It is all impressive and convenient, but along the way, "new and improved" inventions often replace technologies that once worked just fine. Obsolescence creeps in quietly, making room for the next advancement. New technology has a way of cutting into, or completely away from, the tried-and-true.

Into that world stepped Mary Voskuhl some 34 years ago, and today she faces the sharpest edge of that technological blade.

Mary has been the driving force behind Hennessey's Answering Service, a business that once played a vital role in daily life. The wife of a farmer in the Marshall area, Mary decided more than three decades ago to help support her family by taking a chance that was not always common for women at the time, purchasing her own business. That gamble paid off. Mary says the answering service "made for a very busy business."

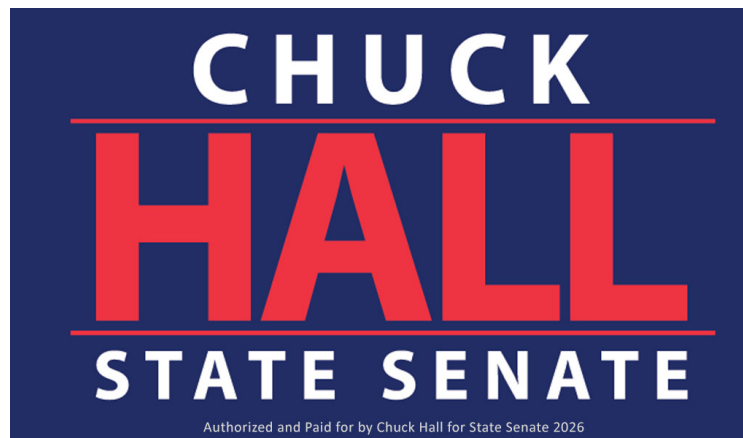

Many readers may not fully understand what an answering service does, as so few still exist today. Answering services handled telephone calls for businesses, professionals, and individuals outside normal business hours. A customer calling a company at 2:30 a.m. on a Saturday, or someone needing to reach a funeral home or propane company after hours, would be routed to an answering service. The service took messages and relayed them to the appropriate professional at a predetermined time. Most of Mary's clients were oil field companies throughout central Oklahoma.

Owning an answering service left little room for downtime. Operators worked when others rested, often from their own homes. Nights, weekends, and holidays belonged to the business, not to family gatherings or social events.

In those days, messages were delivered using fax machines, two-way radios, landlines, and pagers. Today, that technology is nearly extinct. Mary says the cell phone alone has largely replaced the need for answering services. Ironically, better communication technology has eliminated a business built entirely around communication.

Mary Voskuhl will lock the front door of Hennessey's Answering Service for the final time in February 2026. Now in her 80s, she knows it is time to retire. She admits the job often kept her "busy and trapped," and finding employees willing to work nights, weekends, and holidays was never easy. Still, she reflects with gratitude, saying, "The Lord got me through the job."

Retirement will bring something new for Mary, time. Time to attend grandchildren's school events, enjoy church services, meet friends for brunch, or simply explore everyday life at a slower pace. After decades of answering calls for others, Mary Voskuhl has earned the freedom to let the phone ring. Technology may have a cutting edge, but Mary's legacy remains strong. Good luck, Mary. HENNESSEY SCHOOL BOARD GETS FINANCIAL UPDATE, APPROVES CALENDAR AND BOND SALE

The Hennessey Board of Education met Monday, January 12 for their regular monthly meeting and heard encouraging financial news while approving several routine and long-term planning items.

Superintendent Jason Sternberger reported that gross production revenue, which dipped to about $64,000 in December, rebounded in January to roughly $200,000. On top of that, the district saw a $110,000 increase in state aid due to valuation changes. While the school will still use some carryover funds this year, officials now estimate the ending balance will land near $424,000, better than previously expected.

The board approved the proposed 2026–27 school calendar following review by principals and staff representatives. The calendar maintains traditional holiday breaks, including a full week at Thanksgiving and two weeks at Christmas. Sternberger noted that potential legislative action could require additional instructional days next year, and the board may revisit the calendar if state requirements change.

Board members also approved a resolution setting the terms and sale date for $1.215 million in taxable building bonds, part of the district's final bond issuances related to the school dome project. Bids will be opened during a special board meeting scheduled for noon on Wednesday, February 25. Officials said the district remains on track to pay off all related bond debt by approximately 2028, earlier than originally planned, though they cautioned that pending state legislation on property taxes could impact future funding.

In facilities discussion, Sternberger said he is exploring a possible expansion of the pavilion on the northwest corner of the football field to provide permanent storage and seating for school and community events. Quotes will be gathered and presented to the board at a later date.

The board also acknowledged the retirement of longtime district employee Todd Cameron, recognizing his years of service and institutional knowledge.

In personnel action, the board approved adding Janita Nelson as winter concessions coordinator for the 2025–26 school year.
