HENNESSEY VOTERS APPROVE 522 AMBULANCE DISTRICT

Voters within the Hennessey School District approved the creation of a 522 Ambulance District during Tuesday's election, providing a new funding source for local ambulance service.

According to election results, with all precincts reporting, Proposition 522 passed with 378 votes in favor and 218 opposed within the Hennessey School District.

A small portion of the Hennessey School District extends into Garfield County, where voters also supported the measure by a vote of 15 to 6.

These results remain unofficial until certified by the appropriate election board.

The measure establishes a property tax of up to three mills within the district. Officials estimate the tax will generate approximately $221,148 annually to help fund emergency medical services for Hennessey and the surrounding area.

Town officials have repeatedly stated that the tax alone will not fully fund ambulance operations. The existing Hennessey ambulance sales tax is expected to remain in place and continue contributing toward the cost of service.

Supporters argued that the measure was necessary to ensure long-term ambulance coverage after the community learned the actual cost of providing modern EMS service.

Hennessey currently contracts with Mercy Regional EMS for local ambulance coverage.

The district will be governed by a separate 522 Ambulance District Board appointed by the Kingfisher County Commissioners. The board will be responsible for overseeing district funds and making decisions regarding ambulance service contracts.

What Happens Now?

The election result does not automatically place an ambulance service under contract. The newly formed 522 board must first be established and begin operating.

Once organized, the board is expected to seek bids from ambulance providers and review service options before awarding a contract. Officials have said the goal is to secure the highest level of service possible within the available budget.

Town leaders have indicated that the new tax revenue, combined with the existing sales tax, will provide a more stable funding model for maintaining a full-time ambulance service capable of handling advanced emergency medical calls.

The timeline for implementation will depend on the formation of the board, collection of tax revenue, and completion of the contracting process.

Oklahoma voters rejected State Question 832 on June 16, preventing a proposed increase in the state minimum wage from $7.25 an hour to $15 an hour by 2029. Supporters argued that wages have failed to keep pace with rising costs for housing, food, fuel, and other necessities, while opponents contended that a mandated wage increase would place additional financial strain on small businesses, family farms, and employers. With the measure's defeat, Oklahoma will continue using the federal minimum wage rate of $7.25 per hour, which has remained unchanged since 2009.

SMILES FOR DAYS, SOAKED SNEAKERS, AND A FEW WORN-OUT KIDDOS BY SUNDOWN. THAT PRETTY MUCH SUMS UP THE 2ND ANNUAL COPS AND KIDS DAY IN HENNESSEY!

The Hennessey Police Department threw open the doors (well, the inflatables) for an afternoon packed with summer fun outdoors. Kids bounced their hearts out, got drenched in the foam party and water games, hopped on carriage rides, and got to meet K-9 Kase, who showed off some seriously cool skills. Add in games, prizes, and bikes to ride, and you've got the recipe for a great day.

And speaking of bikes, the bike giveaways were the moment everyone was waiting for. The looks on those kids' faces when they realized they were riding home with a brand new bike? Priceless!

Of course, no community event is complete without free hot dogs and cold drinks, and families took full advantage, chatting with officers and neighbors while they refueled. The Kingfisher County Sheriff's Office jumped in on the fun too, helping make it an even bigger celebration.

At the end of the day, it's not really about the bounce houses or the foam (although, let's be honest, those help). It's about giving kids a chance to laugh, families a reason to connect, and the whole community a chance to build great relationships with the folks who serve and protect them. Photos by AAH Angela Bruner.

Thank you from Chief Solis

This year's Cops and Kids Day was a blast, and the Hennessey Police Department says it couldn't have happened without the community stepping up in a big way.

"We were blown away by how generous our local businesses, organizations, and neighbors were," said Chief Solis. "Between the bikes, goods, time, and just plain support, folks helped us put together a day full of smiles and good memories for the kids and families of Hennessey."

A big shoutout goes to: 2 Fellas Moving Company, 4T's Grocery Store, Angela and Mark Bruner, Certex, Choate Oil, Dana and Ron Decrow, Eagle Mart, EMS/Thurmond, First Christian Church, Fred Petrolia, the Hennessey Child Study Club, Hennessey Police Officers and their families, Luis and Antoinette Rojo, the Hennessey Powder and String Club, Hometown Market on Main, InterBank, Liberty Lift, the Lions Club, Surge, the Town of Hennessey Public Works, and Wayne Wright.

"Days like this are what it's all about," Chief Solis added. "It's a great chance to build relationships with the families we serve, and I'm thankful to everyone who cares enough to make it happen. This kind of generosity is just part of what makes Hennessey such a great place to call home."

The Lions and Turtles

by Bonny Flesher

Once a week I have the privilege of attending meetings with a group called the Kingfisher Lions Club. It's a time for lunch and fellowship. During the school year, we have Jr. Lions in attendance. The seniors attend meetings throughout the year so we can applaud their accomplishments, cheer them on as they enter a new chapter, and insist they sing a couple of songs. I remember attending Lions Club in Hennessey as a senior, and they threw rolls at us! Back then, the meetings were held in the back room of Wong's Restaurant. When the seniors leave our meetings today, hopefully their tummies are full and they're smiling with memories of the experience!

We always have speakers to keep us in the know, teach us a little something, and inspire us! The Lions hold a couple of fundraisers to offer scholarships to a few of our Jr. Lions. At the end of the school year, we bring our Jr. Lions together one last time for singing, food, and awarding the scholarships. But being a Lion doesn't stop there—community service is the core of our club.

One of my personal favorites is watching the Kingfisher Lions help pack boxes at the Kingfisher County Food Bank. It's very entertaining watching the director instruct the Lions on how to load boxes with items. Honestly, watching this is like watching someone herd cats. A little redirecting and a lot of patience always get the job done. We all walk away knowing who can take direction and who needs a bit more help. Overall, there's always plenty of laughter while serving the community.

The Lions Club also covers at least one night at Kingfisher in Lights. I like to hang out at the back gate—it gives us a chance to talk to those driving through the park, and it's always fun to see what town people are visiting from. Our Lions volunteers also like to assist the Kingfisher County Extension office with their fundraiser benefiting Kingfisher County 4-H. The Lions collect retired eyeglasses too, which are donated to the Lions Eye Bank for others in need.

I always love the beginning of football season. There's nothing that warms my mom-heart more than seeing kids pile their plates with food when we feed the football team. There's always a project that needs attention, from painting buildings to clearing limbs. The community brings us together as a group, and we go home with the gift of fellowship.

But there's one event the Kingfisher Lions Club sponsors that my adult sons still talk about: the 4th of July turtle races.

Preparations started a week early at our house. All family and friends were instructed to keep watch for turtles. I swear I drove countless miles down country roads hunting for them! I often thought there was some kind of turtle memo sent out telling them to hide the week before the celebration. After we found our winning turtles, keeping them from escaping our backyard was always a challenge. Maybe the reason our turtles were winners was because we'd already made them so mad long before they sat at the starting line.

My boys would save broken car model parts and glue them onto the turtles—we had motors and mag wheels on those turtles! I learned fast to be careful when picking them up. My boys, being boys, would crack up laughing watching their mom pick up a mad turtle and have it relieve itself right in her hands.

After the big race, we always released the turtles back to the countryside. I've often wondered what people thought when they saw a turtle trucking down the road sporting a motor and mag wheels. Bet you'd do a double take!

To all my fellow Lions, I just want to say ROAR! Come join us and get involved!

it's practically a fact. Yes, we know that's not how facts work but still... It's a very common opinion.

We're not trying to add anything complicated to your already full plate. But, we've noticed that, when it comes to fathers, social media posts tend to focus on two very drastic extremes: bad dads or super "influencer-type" dads. We're here to tell the everyday-good-dads that you are enough. As long as you're trying, you care and your kids know they're loved. You're doing enough. {Alexa play 'That's Something to be Proud Of' by Montgomery Gentry}

Our advice for getting quality time with your kids while not adding a whole new thing, is to find ways to include them in things you're already doing... let them help you on your next project/chore or to enjoy your hobby with you. We love and very much believe the saying "more is caught than taught" ~ meaning you'll actually be teaching them and passing down your wisdom without having to give a lecture. Win-win!

It's been said that kids reach peak oxytocin levels while playing with their dad like they do when being cuddled by their mom.

We're not scientists or psychologists but we'd venture to guess that they'll get the feel goods from learning with their dad too. Keep up the good work, dads! You're doing great!

Thank you for all you do and for being willing to do even more. We see you! We appreciate you! Happy Father's Day!

Here's to the dads that get up early enough to make breakfast or go get donuts for the fam.

Here's to the dads that kiss their wife in front of their kids.

Here's to the dads that show up for the things that are important to their family (sporting events, club activities, concerts/performances, etc)

Here's to the dads that get their family to church ^bonus if you're a daily example of servitude, leadership and wisdom. A dad that prays for his family. Grill master. Lawn enthusiast. Scarer of monsters. Driver of road trips. Handyman/Fixer-of-all-the-things. Pool boy. Pushover for the family pets he didn't want. Example of a good partner... whether you're married to the mother of your children or not you can be an example of a good partner/coparent. Dads, you will be your son's first example of what it means to be a man and your daughter will most likely marry someone like you~ we're here to encourage you and hopefully simplify how to make sure that's a good thing.

Kids spell love T-I-M-E.

Studies show that when a dad is securely involved, his kids grow up with a more rock-solid sense of self-esteem. They build healthier relationships, dream bigger, thrive academically, and find the courage to take the kind of positive risks that lead to a successful life.

While big family vacations are amazing ~and we sincerely hope you get to take them~ we cannot stress enough the importance of your presence in the seemingly mundane day-to-day life. We repeat: your presence matters. Time with your family doesn't have to be extravagant or extra exhausting to have a positive impact on the relationships with your kids... and your wife. As wives ourselves we can confirm that our husbands are most attractive to us when they're being good dads. Enough of the moms we know agree that

56 Years of Handshakes and Hard Work

By Amy Townsend

Some stories are easy to write. This one wasn't. Not because there isn't enough to say about Mundy Martin, but because after 56 years in business, where do you even begin?

Do you start with the thousands of customers he helped? The employees who worked alongside him? Or do you simply start by saying thank you?

Because for a lot of people in Hennessey, Kingfisher, and the surrounding communities, Mundy Martin has always just been there. A familiar face. A trusted handshake. A man who built a business one relationship at a time. And somehow, after all these years, the details may change a little, but the smile that follows never does, that familiar, slightly ornery grin we all know so well.

Over the years, L&M Supply became more than a place to buy parts and supplies. It became one of those businesses people trusted because they knew the man behind the counter.

For over 5 decades, customers walked through those doors looking for parts, supplies, or answers. What they found was a man who genuinely enjoyed people. A man who took time to visit. A man who understood that business was never really about what was being sold, but who you were serving.

When I asked what he'll miss most about coming to work each day, he replied "The people. I like people."

Mundy's journey began long before L&M Supply. Born in Pawhuska as one of ten children, he and his twin sister were the babies of the family. After serving in the United States Army from 1958 to 1964.

In July of 1970, at just 31 years old, Mundy found himself at a crossroads. His employer wanted him to move to Mississippi. Mundy had other plans.

Alongside partner Oran Lloyd, he opened L&M Supply and set out to build something of his own right here in Oklahoma.

Of the many stories Mundy could have shared, one still stands out. While sitting in the office one day, an employee released the pressure from a pump in the shop, and debris went flying. The blast was so powerful he thought the entire building had come down around him. "It went from the back of the shop all the way to the road." Thankfully, no one was injured, and the hole remains visible to this day.

While the business grew to employ as many as nine people at one time, family remained at the center of everything. Mundy and Sharon are proud parents of Cory Martin, Craig Martin, Mike Haymaker, and Tammy Marsh, and are blessed with 9 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

As for advice to the next generation? His answer was as straightforward as you'd expect. "First, learn how to work. And if you don't know something, don't be afraid to ask." Simple advice from a man who spent more than half a century proving exactly what that looks like.

At 87 years old, it seemed only fitting to ask what retirement might look like. "Whatever I want to do," Mundy replied. Before he could say much more, Sharon gave her two cents. "Napping." The speed of her response suggested she knows him better than anyone.

There are far too many people to thank by name, but Mundy wanted everyone to know how grateful he is for the support, friendships, and memories made over the years.

Like any journey, there were ups and downs, but in the end, he considers himself fortunate.

And while retirement may officially be here, don't be surprised if you stop by L&M Supply and see him from time to time. After all some places just feel like home. photos by AAN Ivan Cabral

MEET THE HENNESSEY FIREFIGHTERS

Each week, the Hennessey POST will feature a member of the Hennessey Fire Department, sharing their stories, what inspired them to join the fire service, and some of the accomplishments and experiences they've had along the way.

Battalion Chief Terry Berkenbile

For nearly three decades, Terry Berkenbile has answered the call whenever the citizens of Hennessey needed help.

A 1979 graduate of Hennessey High School, Berkenbile joined the Hennessey Fire Department on April 9, 1998, with a simple goal: to help the people of his community. Today, he serves as Battalion Chief and remains one of the department's longest serving members.

Outside of the fire service, Berkenbile owns and operates Terry's Pump and Supply. He has completed Firefighter I training and is a Basic EMT, skills that have helped him serve on countless emergency calls over the years.

When asked what he enjoys most about the fire service, Berkenbile points to helping the community and working alongside his fellow firefighters.

"Helping the community and assisting my brothers on fire calls," he said. "I've been on thousands of fire calls on this awesome fire department," he said. "It's great being a part of it, and my fire department brothers, they are all great."

His nearly 30 years of dedication have made him a familiar and trusted face in the Hennessey Fire Department and the community he serves.
